Sewage treatment plant

EPA, US Attorney's office continue investigations

■ City offers to provide attorneys to counsel employees who are contacted for interviews

by Steve Marschke

According to a confidential memo written to some of West Sacramento's sewage treatment plant workers, an investigation of the plant by the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Attorney's Office is expected to continue this year. The author of the memo, city attorney Robert Murphy of Kronick, Moskovitz, Tiedemann and Girard, said it is apparently a "criminal" investigation.

The two federal agencies are reportedly looking into practices at the plant which some employees have denounced as illegal.

In the memo, which the News-Ledger was able to examine, the city offered to provide attorneys to any employee who is contacted for an interview by investigators.

"The attorney's sole obligation would be to represent your interests and not those of the City," it stated. The firm of Beveridge and Diamond has been chosen for this task.

The letter also warns that anything said during an interview with federal investigators could be "evidence against the employee, city or both in criminal or civil prosecution."

City Manager Joseph Goeden, whose office previously had not acknowledged the federal investigations, said Tuesday that "the letter kind of speaks for itself. We're acknowledging that there are investigators out there."

He said that the memo to employees does not specifically recommend that they retain an attorney.

"We're just advising them of their rights," he said.

Spokespeople for both the E.P.A. and the U.S. Attorney's office have both told the News-Ledger that they cannot discuss ongoing investigations, or even confirm whether a specific investigation is in progress.

Presumably, the investigators are looking at public works department practices that allegedly include "pre-testing" of waste samples.

A number of employees, all speaking on condition of anonymity, described this "pre-testing" last year to the News-Ledger.

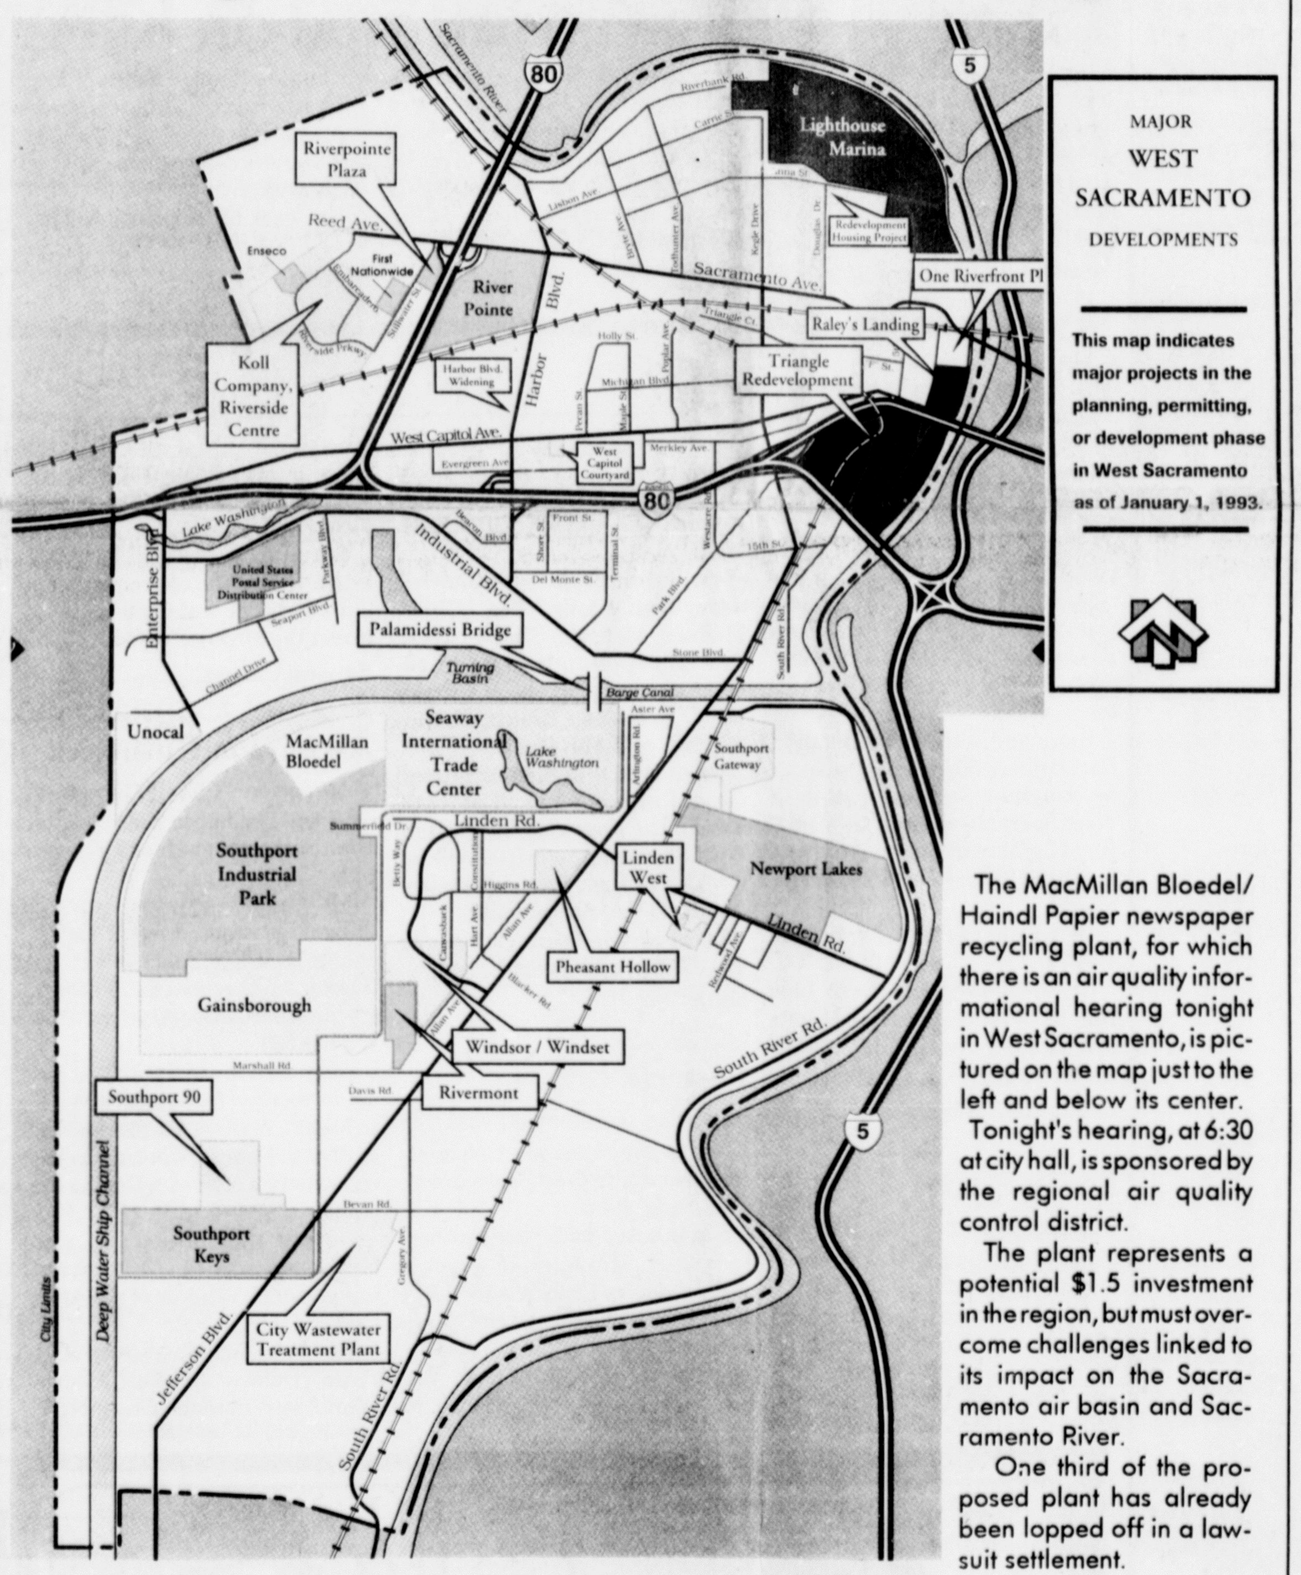
It was claimed that a common practice at the plant was to first make sure that "random" samples would pass required tests before actually taking the samples. In this way, some employees said, it was virtually assured that poorly treated sewage would not be detected and reported.

Management officials denied knowing anything about this alleged practice.

But both sides agreed that accurately chlorinating the plant's wastes (and therefore killing harmful bacteria before the treated waste is discharged into the Sacramento River) was a tough challenge at the South River Road facility.

Outdated equipment and a very uneven sewage flow have helped make proper chlorination difficult at the West Sacramento plant, they said.

The grand scheme of things



MAJOR WEST SACRAMENTO DEVELOPMENTS

This map indicates major projects in the planning, permitting, or development phase in West Sacramento as of January 1, 1993.

Tonight's hearing, at 6:30 at city hall, is sponsored by the regional air quality control district.

The plant represents a potential $1.5 investment in the region, but must overcome challenges linked to its impact on the Sacramento air basin and Sacramento River.

One third of the proposed plant has already been lopped off in a lawsuit settlement.

Woman's body found

The body of a woman who was apparently in her 30s was found late Saturday night on Fourth Street in West Sacramento's Broderick area.

Investigators found no gunshot or stab wounds, but are handling the case as a homocide.

Further information was unavailable.

In other homocide information, police have reported no suspects arrested in the December killing of Danny Bustamante, 24, of West Sacramento.

Correction on dinner

In last week's issue, The News-Ledger incorrectly named the sponsor of the charity Christmas dinner given two weeks ago at the Broderick Christian Center.

The event was sponsored by the West Sacramento Meals Coalition.

We apologize for the error.

Planners

The West Sacramento Planning Commission will hold a meeting on Thursday, January 6, at 6 p.m. in the city council chambers, 2101 Stone Blvd.

History

A meeting of the West Sacramento Housing Advisory Commission will take place on Tuesday, January 11, at 6 p.m. in the city council chambers, 2101 Stone Blvd.

Agenda items will include consideration of the proposed housing advisory commission "mission statement" and approval of a site plan for 40 units at Maple and Holly Streets.

Old phone books

New telephone books are now showing up on the doorsteps of West Sacramento residents. But, don't throw your old book in the trash. Instead, take it to Raley's at 1601 West Capitol Avenue and recycle it.

Phone book distribution began December 22. In a joint effort with Raley's and Pacific Bell Directory, the city of West Sacramento is urging area residents and businesses to recycle their outdated books.

City residents can take their books to Raley's and leave them at the customer service podium or the camera department. People are asked not to dump their books in the newspaper recycling bin in the parking lot in front of the store.

For the first time, books collected during the effort

Activists: already too much low income housing at project site

■ By an 8-5 vote, residents of a Maple/Holly area citizens group expressed their displeasure with a planned housing project Tuesday evening

by Steve Marschke

The last time a neighborhood group in West Sacramento gathered to oppose a city-sponsored low income housing project, it was the action of a relatively well-to-do neighborhood objecting to a major new element planned for their midst.

But a new citizens group composed residents of Maple and Holly streets (north of West Capitol Avenue) now fears that a 40-unit multi-family housing project will bring more of what they already have: low income housing, with attendant trash, abandoned appliances and other problems.

> 'We have enough low income housing as it is. Maple and Holly is one of the worst areas in West Sacramento.'
> --anti-housing project activist

At a meeting attended by about 25 people Tuesday evening, the Maple/Holly citizens group generally voted against the proposed 40-unit project.

"It was mostly voted 'no,' " said Kerry Valine, one neighborhood activist. "The rest of the group said yes, depending on whether the city would clean up the rest of the neighborhood."

Valine said the project would heap more ills on an already troubled area.

"We have enough low income housing as it is," he said. "Maple and Holly Street is one of the worst areas in West Sacramento, we figure."

But, as part of a lawsuit settlement involving the proposed Lighthouse Marina development and affordable housing activists, the city is required to construct the new units somewhere.

Joanne Auerbach, the housing project manager for West Sacramento's redevelopment agency, said the site was one of two chosen last March during a public request for proposals (RFP).

"We put out a notice and asked property owners and developers to submit ideas. This site, and the one on West Capitol Avenue (where another project is now underway) were chosen."

The land has not yet been purchased by the city, she said, and has been given no development entitlements. The Maple/Holly housing site totals about four acres in two parcels.

What's planned will be a high quality project, she added.

"It's two-story," Auerbach related. "They're more like townhouses. We working on coming up with a preliminary site plan."

The project will be developed by a non-profit group called the Community Housing Opportunities Corporation, formerly Davis Community Housing.

"One of the main requirements will be that it will have an on-site manager," she added. That would help keep the project clean and orderly.

'College success' for high school students

Sacramento City College is offering a special class at River City High School in the spring titled "College Success." This course is designed to enhance a student's ability to maximize their performance both inside and outside the classroom. Through a series of very active exercises, students will learn to de-mystify college professors and college vocabulary and redefine success.

Students will work on time management, note taking, memory improvement, communication techniques and values clarification in an atmosphere of self-exploration and small group discussion.

Studies have shown that College Success students earn higher GPAs, complete more units, and drop out of college about half as frequently as students who have not taken the class.

College Success will meet on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays during seventh period, 2:05-2:55 p.m. This is a three-unit class which can be used for high school and college credit.

For registration information, call the River City High School counseling center at 371-0700.

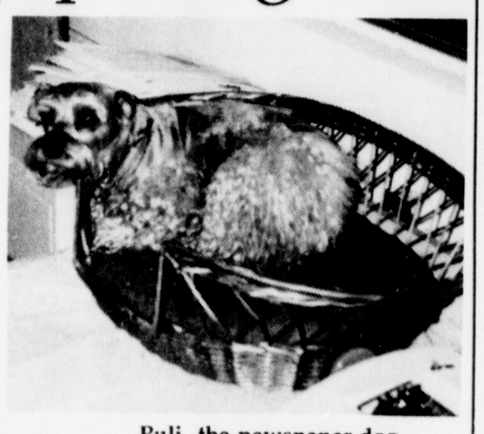
Newspaper dog dies



Puli, the newspaper dog

Puli, the well-known newspaper dog of West Sacramento, died last week at an extremely advanced age at his home here. He was a lifelong resident of the community, and had kept regular office hours at the News-Ledger for more than 15 years before his retirement.

A creature of modest temperament, he was admired for his loving nature and natual curiosity. His enjoyment of travel took him on trips to the mountains, seashore and high deserts, as well as many fishing trips which he undertook annually; of a modest disposition, he was friendly to all and greatly enjoyed social contact with persons from every walk of life.

He is survived by an army of loving and caring friends and acquaintances. He was the particular friend and comforter of Julius A. Feher, founding editor and publisher of the News-Ledger, and was his constant visitor.

Winter means eagles, vacant camping sites

Cache Creek County Park camp hosts are reminding Yolo County residents to take advantage of the sunny, clear days and bright starlight nights up in the county park.

At this time of year recreational vehicles and tent campers can find a paved, grassy camp site without a reservation. The middle site of the park and all the camping facilities are open through the holidays and the rest of the winter. The middle site, where camping is available and where the camp hosts live, is located approximately 5 miles above Rumsey on Highway 16. The camp hosts have trail information, eagle spotting information and can offer any assistance you might need.

Bald eagles, which have returned for winter feeding in the Cache Creek area, continue to be spotted from the campground and from Highway 16. This area is one of the southern-most wintering areas on the Pacific Coast for these birds. The eagles are frequently seen in the early morning, flying through the canyon, over the creek, looking for breakfast. The Great Blue Heron and many other bird species are also seen in the area.

A special annual camping pass is available only to Yolo County residents. The 1994 pass is now on sale and can be purchased at the county administration building, in the general services agency office, room 203. The camping pass is $60 for the year and allows the holder unlimited camping at Cache Creek Park.

Without the pass, overnight camping at the park is $10 a night and day use is $3 per day.

Additional information regarding the pass or the park can be obtained by calling the Yolo County general services agency at 666-8115.

SPORTS

The Sports Insider

by Richard Novoa

The 49ers have a funny way to get ready for the playoffs.

Philadelphia's 37-34 victory over the 49ers left them with a two-game losing streak. A team once considered a strong Super Bowl contender has now lost three of its last four games. San Francisco will face either Detroit, Minnesota or the New York Giants in an NFC semifinal game at 1 p.m. Jan. 15 at Candlestick Park.

Steve Young set two significant records in the NFL. Young became the first quarterback in NFL history to win three consecutive passing titles. Young's 101.5 rating beat out Dallas's Troy Aikman, who finished with a 99.0 mark. He also broke Montana's team record for passing yards in a season.

Young finished with 4,023, surpassing Montana's record of 3,944, set in 1990.

The 49ers 1994 home schedule will include Dallas, Denver and the Los Angeles Raiders. The 49ers will travel next year to play in Kansas City!

The NFL playoffs are ready to go Sat., Jan. 8, with Detroit hosting Green Bay (1 p.m.) and Pittsburgh at Kansas City (9:30 a.m.). Sunday, the wild-card N.Y. Giants host the Vikings (9:30 a.m.) and at 1 p.m., the Raiders and Broncos battle in Los Angeles.

In the AFC, Buffalo and Houston have first round byes, as well as Dallas and San Francisco in the NFC.

Green Bay will beat Detroit and play Dallas next week, and the Giants will win and travel to San Francisco!

Kansas City will win, and I think the Raiders might be able to pull out another close one over John Elway and the Broncos.

I had fun sitting at the Rose Bowl game in 75 degree weather, watching the thousands of Wisconsin fans go absolutely bananas in their 21-16 victory over UCLA. It was only their second bowl appearance in the school's 104-year history!

The Wisconsin fans were crazy!

Ticket prices sky-rocketed from $46 face value to over $400! They outnumbered the UCLA fans two to one -- so much for the home field advantage!

I predicted last month that Charlie Ward would lead the Florida State Seminoles to the National title, and he did, with a last-minute drive that ended with a field goal and an 18-16 win over No. 2 ranked Nebraska.

This was a wild week of football action!

Four NFL games went into overtime in one week, compared to only two in the previous 17 weeks!

See ya next week!!

WASHINGTON NEWS ITEMS

The Sacramento river registers eight feet five inches U. S. gauge at the Southern Pacific bridge yesterday.

The meeting of the West Sacramento Improvement Association, which is regularly scheduled for the evening of the first Friday of each month, has been postponed this week because this Friday evening is Good Friday and nearly all the residents of the district are going to attend church services at this side of the river or in Sacramento. This provision was made by the Board of Trustees and President Jonganeel since the last meeting of the club. A full attendance is expected on Friday evening, April 9th, and postal cards have been sent out to all members of the association. On that evening a basket social will also be held when the ladies of the association expect to reap a small harvest in the auctioning of the lunches put up by them and the contents of which are to be unknown. The lady who puts up the lunch basket will be supposed to partake of it with the bidder who takes it in at the auction.

Rain would do a great deal of good to the ranchers in West Sacramento and the Holland District, but so far none of the farmers of those districts are suffering for moisture. A wonderful spinach crop is being harvested at the present time and the great truck loads of produce being taken to Sacramento canneries is proof of the productiveness of the soil. Never was alfalfa hay in such splendid condition as it is this year and the peculiar part of it is that the growth of weeds is not at all so heavy as it has been in the past.

The 24-inch pump that has been in use on the Sacramento River under the control of the West Sacramento Company was started last Tuesday and has been working since then twenty-four hours a day filling the irrigation canals of the district. In less than two weeks the trustees of the district hope to have the canals filled so that every farmer along the distribution system can have all the water he needs. Last winter the canals were drained of all stagnant water so that from now on only fresh water will be available

MONROE BELIEVES NO MURDER COMMITTED AT WESTGATE

Sheriff J. W. Monroe made further inquiry yesterday in the finding of a bundle of clothes on the levee near Broderick and discouraged all unwarranted reports of murder or tragedy by declaring that it was his belief that the clothes were probably stolen and left on the levee after being searched, or else were lost by some person passing that way.

"No signs of struggle—no footprints—nothing to indicate anything out of the ordinary," was the report of Monroe.

against William Johnson was called last Friday before Judge Barry the complaining witness, Jose Gomez, failed to appear, indicating that Gomez was somewhat guilty in the charge made against him by Johnson of criminal intent to assault the eight-year-old daughter of Johnson. It seems that Gomez, after swearing became afraid of an inquiry and pulled out of town as quickly as possible. When the case was called in the court of Judge Barry Gomez failed to appear to prosecute and the charge of assault against Johnson was dismissed.

Another case that was dismissed by Judge Barry was that against James R. Murphy and Helen Murphy for theft of several articles from the cabin of J. Noren in the West Sacramento Auto Camp. Noren claimed that the Murphys had stolen from his cabin several articles of value, including a revolver, a camera, a set of pearl beads, a vanity case, a hair brush, a Boston bag and a bond worth $50.00, as well as $4.75 in cash. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy appeared in court at the appointed time on March 26th, but Noren failed to show up. The Murphys now are looking for Noren to prosecute him for false arrest.

F. M. Boyce of Oakland, arrested on the 21st of March by Traffic Officer Jacobs for reckless driving, pleaded guilty last Monday by mail and was fined $30. He paid the fine.

Al and Flora Hagen, tried before Judge Barry's court March 23rd on a charge of petty larceny, were found guilty as charged, except in the case of Al Hagen, from whom further testimony is to be heard. They are to appear before Judge Barry for sentence early next week.

A charge of assault was sworn to

STOOLPIGEON FOOLS ENFORCEMENT SQUAD HERE

Trouble looms ahead for local federal under-cover agents if the suspicions of Federal Agent A. R. Shurtleff bear fruit.

For Shurtleff is angry today—very angry.

Yesterday Shurtleff braved a warm afternoon and, accompanied by Sheriff James W. Monroe, started out to make things merry for the bootleggers of Washington, Yolo County.

The stage was set, "buys" having already been made by the under-cover agents, and Shurtleff was ready to do a land office business.

First, Shurtleff went to 303 G street, Washington. He raided the place in his best manner. But there was no liquor.

Then, a trifle discouraged, but not without hope, the agent went to 501 G street. No luck.

Next he visited 417 Fourth street and again went away disappointed. A few minutes later he visited an auto camp but with the identical result.

And so he is making an investigation of his under-cover agents and if his suspicions are correct, well, trouble looms ahead.

CLAIMS ALLOWED BY YOLO COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

At the meeting of the County Board of Supervisors of Yolo County, held in Woodland March 23rd, the following claims were allowed:

Road District No. 1.

Associated Oil Co., gas and oil ..... $ 37.17

FILLING FOR ROADWAY TO M STREET BRIDGE GOES SLOWLY

The work being done in the way of filling the roadway between the M Street bridge and the new subway under the Sacramento Northern embankment moved tediously and slower than anticipated by the Tucker Construction Company.

The filling being taken out of the river by the dredge Neptune is mostly sand and gravel, which the contractor believed could be moved westward by a heavy stream of water pumped into a trough.

It was believed that a six-inch stream of water would effectually move this sand, but since the pumping was started two six-inch pumps each pouring a continuous stream are unable to move the sand to destination.

Close to the levee the sand is now being deposited, but, nevertheless, the work goes along very slowly and may not be finished in the time specified under the contract. An extension of time may be asked for and likely will be granted to the contractor.

In the meantime there is considerable flooding of water in the neighborhood. The water now reaches the floors of all the houses on the west of Second Street and naturally these will be warped before the work is completed.

Scrapers are being used to move the sand for filling in some portions where the grade is to be raised.

RANCH HAND DROPS DEAD AT FREEPORT

IMPROVEMENT AT WEST SACTO AUTO CAMP INVITES TOURISTS

Sice- Pearson Brothers took hold of the destinies of the West Sacramento Auto Camp great improvements have been made in the way of providing conveniences for tourists.

All cabins, of which there are over sixty, are equipped with gas plates for cooking and for tourists who have their own tents a community kitchen is at their service with eight gas plates ready for use.

The community laundry is available to all people within the camp and shower baths, of which there are eight, four for men and four for women, are at the convenience of all campers.

The pumping outfit which was installed about a year ago has been turned around so that a cover could be placed over it and so that it might be kept in absolutely sanitary condition.

At the present writing all mattresses in the auto camp are being sterilized and recovered and some low places in the camp have been filled with sand and dirt.

Around the camp no loafers are permitted and special preparation has been made to take care of garbage or refuse from the cabins.

SCHOOL SITE SURVEYED AND STAKED BY PROCTOR

Last Wednesday County Engineer Proctor finished the surveying and staking of the new school site in the West Sacramento District.

The streets leading to the site were also surveyed both from Carly Acres and Westgate.

Concrete monuments were placed at four corners of the site and the location may be viewed by any interested property owner.

The location is south of the state highway in West Sacramento [illegible]

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

'Disgruntled employee' theory starting to look thin

The feds are back, after several months in which it looked like the Environmental Protection Agency might have quietly concluded an investigation of West Sacramento's waste water treatment plant and gone away.

According to an internal city memo (written, said the city manager, to advise employees of their rights during the investigation), both the EPA and the U.S. Attorney's office are expected to continue investigating the plant's employees and management.

The length of the investigation, the involvement of the federal judicial branch, and the characterization of the investigation by the West Sacramento city attorney as an apparently "criminal" investigation all point to the seriousness of the matter. It is less and less likely that the allegations of improper operations at the plant are merely the imaginings of "one or two disgruntled employees," as city management has previously claimed.

Certainly, more than that number of employees talked to the News-Ledger last year and described practices which seemed to be illegal. And certainly, federal investigators must be receiving some kind of corroboration to support the claims of these one or two public works employees. Otherwise, the investigation would have ended months ago.

In the city's internal memo, city officials offered to provide lawyers for their employees to guide them through interviews with investigators and protect the employees' rights. Although the spirit of this offer may be commendable, it raises a question:

Can an attorney hired by the city truly look after the sole interests of the employees, and not those of the city government, when those interests appear destined to collide?

The memo stated that "the attorney's sole obligation would be to represent your interests and not those of the City." But, since the city of West Sacramento will be the paying client, won't this be a little difficult?

If the testimony received by the federal investigators matches that received by the News-Ledger last year, the interests of the city management and the interests of the city employees will not be the same. It seems clear that illegal practices did, in fact, habitually occur at the plant.

The issue may come down to a matter of blame. It is in the interests of the employees to show that the policies in question were ordered by management; and it's in the interest of management to show that it was the employees themselves who were responsible for anything strange going on.

The treatment plant's employees would be well advised to consider finding their own attorney, even if the city government declines to pick up the tab.

All of this, of course, does not presume that anyone at the plant was guilty of criminal violations. Questionable practices clearly occurred. But the federal investigation into the severity and deliberateness of these practices continues, and no one at the plant has yet been even charged with a crime -- let alone convicted.

Senator Boxer discusses 1993 legislative accomplishmets, plans for 1994

by Barbara Boxer
U.S. Senator, D-California

When I was sworn into the Senate on January 5, 1993, I brought with me an agenda focused on California's needs.

I have listened to people from all across our state, and their advice has helped me advance proposals to strengthen our economy, to fight for jobs, to make our neighborhoods and our environment safer.

I thought you would be interested in some of the specific proposals I have worked on in 1993.

JOBS AND THE ECONOMY

* The Conversion Clearinghouse legislation I authored to help workers, businesses and communities hurt by base closures and defense cuts was unanimously passed by the Senate and adopted by the administration. The Clearinghouse is now "up and running" to give conversion assistance information to workers and businesses to help keep them productive and competitive.

* A Worker Retraining Plan to speed the clean-up and conversion of military bases was essential to easing the burden of military base closures on local communities. I introduced legislation, which I call retain and retrain, allowing the Secretary of Defense to retrain and employ civilian defense workers, who would otherwise lose their jobs because of a base closure, to assist in the environmental clean-up of those bases. This amendment is now law.

* The Revision of U.S. Export Control Laws was especially crucial for California since one out of ten jobs depends on exports, and over one quarter of all manufacturing jobs are within the electronic sector. For several months I worked with the administration, in meetings with Secretary Brown, in letters to other key administration officials, and in discussions with the President to revise limits that threaten the competitiveness of California's high technology industries.

I have fought for the high-tech industry on a number of other key issues, including improving trade promotion, pushing for accelerated depreciation of semiconductor manufacturing equipment, advocating for changes in accounting requirements which benefit high tech firms and forwarding specific concerns about the GATT to trade representative Mickey Kantor.

* The Stanford Linear Accelerator was selected by the administration as the site for the location of the new high energy physics accelerator known as the B-Factory. Recognizing that this project would cre-

Hannigan: wishes for the New Year

by Tom Hannigan, D-Fairfield
California Assembly
Majority Leader

Children are often referred to as our most precious resource. Society's ability to nurture, educate and protect our children unfortunately lags far behind our public pronouncements.

The senseless crime against Polly Klaas both heightens our fear and frustration about the safety of our children and reminds us of their vulnerability. Thus, it is my hope that children and their well-being will be the top priority for us in 1994.

While we can not reverse the events involving Polly's death, I hope action will soon be taken to keep repeat violent career criminals like Richard Allen Davis off our streets and out of our neighborhoods. I support the "three strikes, you're out" initiative proposed for the November 1994 ballot which would increase sentences for violent offenders. I also support a bill (AB 971) which is similar to the proposed initiative and is pending in the assembly's public safety committee.

In addition to physical well-being, we need to ensure our children are well-fed, educated and given the support and encouragement necessary to succeed. If we are to invest in the future of California, we need to invest first in our children. That entails a continuum of services ranging from prenatal care to a quality higher education system that is accessible to all.

In the coming year, my legislative packet will include measures to help improve the daily lives of all children in our communities.:

* Education will be at the forefront this legislative session. The majority of our public school personnel are struggling against great odds these days to provide our children with decent educations. If our schools are to meet the challenges of an ever growing number of kids with increasingly diverse needs, they will require all the help the legislature, parents and communities can give.

* Child care continues to be a major concern of parents. An extension and possible expansion of California's existing employer supported child care tax credits would encourage employers to increase their commitment to employee benefits.

* For children in need of mental health care, I am researching the possibility of lowering the Medi-Cal age requirements for those seeking professional counseling. The earlier the intervention the higher the success rate and overall well-being of our children.

I will do all I can to ensure that the legislature's top priority in the coming year is the safety and well-being of our children. I hope their welfare is at the top of your "wish list" as well.

EDITOR:

On behalf of the tenants of Riverbend Senior Manor, I would like to thank all of the individuals who have contributed to the fund for our sign, especially those from out of town as well as the city of West Sacramento for their pledges.

With this new sign, which states our name and address, emergency vehicles will be able to find our residence with a much better response time, which could mean the difference of saving a life or losing one.

Again, thank you to all of you who contributed for your care and generosity.

will be recycled by Fiberwood, a Sacramento-based fiber mill, that will shred the books and turn them into attic insulation, hydroseeding mulch, and a number of other products. Recently, Fiberwood mulch has been used in the area devastated by fires in Southern California.

Businesses with large numbers of directories are encouraged to first call Fiberwood at 387-9754 and then recycle them at the Fiberwood yard, 5854 88th Street, Sacramento.

Last year the drive kept more than 500 tons of phone books from throughout Sacramento and Yolo Counties out of the landfill. Sponsors are hoping to collect even more this year.

Anyone with questions can call the city recycling coordinator at 373-5810.

SENATOR

ate hundreds of high wage jobs for the state, I, along with several members of California's delegation, urged the administration over a period of months to select the California sitel. Energy secretary O'Leary called me to inform me of the decision. I will continue to work with her on such issues as converting our nuclear labs to peacetime use.

* The Advanced Technology Transit Bus — the so-called "Stealth Bus" project envisions a production assembly plant in California employing hundreds of workers with total employment reaching nearly 1,000 jobs. I was pleased that the senate appropriation committee approved my funding request for this project because it will both create jobs and breathe new life into our ailing aerospace and other defense related industries in California. I'll also continue fighting to move California's electric vehicle industry forward to help keep our state on the cutting edge of these innovative new technologies.

* The Technology Reinvestment Project is part of the federal government's effort to coordinate over $472 million in defense conversion programs. This funding is an important first step in helping the many California businesses and communities hit hard by defense cuts make the transformation to a civilian economy. I met with the head of the advanced research projects agency who makes these funding decisions and spoke with commerce secretary Brown and others in the administration regarding California's needs. I am pleased that California projects have received over $150 million of these funds to date.

Boxer favors starting 'boot camps' for non-violent offenders, preserving abortion choice.

I am particularly pleased that in the first month of his new term I was able to inform President Clinton that he had an opportunity to spend uncommitted conversion funds which the Bush administration had refused to allocate.

* Emergency Relief for California Citrus Farmers was essential for the farmers who suffered significant crop losses. That is why I fought to ensure that California's citrus farmers received $10 million in disaster relief to compensate them for losses due to the devastating freeze in December 1990. I also advocated for grape growers and vintners, avocado growers and other elements of California agriculture on a variety of issues.

* The Clinton Economic Plan is projected to create 1.9 million jobs in California from 1993-96. I fought hard for a number of provisions that are significant for California, including a targeted capital gains cut for small business investments, a permanent R&D tax credit, enterprise zones, permanent extension of the low-income housing tax credit and the mortgage revenue bond program, and tax relief for victims of natural disasters. Our firm commitment to deficit reduction has kept long-term interest rates at their lowest level in decades, freeing billions of motgage dollars from California's high-priced real estate market.

CRIME

I have been an outspoken supporter of anti-crime legislation, including the Brady Bill and Senator Feinstein's ban on certain assault weapons.

I supported the Senate Crime Bill, which gives our police officers, our judges and our community leaders the tools they need to take back our streets. I supported banning military-style assault weapons; adding 100,00 new police officers to the ranks of local law enforcement; funding new prison construction; establishing boot camps for nonviolent youthful offenders; developing a national criminal background check for child care workers; prohibiting the sale or transfer of guns to juveniles; funding for anti-gang programs and, funding for drug treatment programs.

This bill als includes the first comprehensive package of federal initiatives to combat gender-based violence, the Violence Against Women Act, which I co-sponsored.

In addition to fighting for the passage of these anti-crime provisions, I was successful in adding my own amendments to the Crime Bill:

* Arson Legislation will toughen penalties for arson and ensure mandatory minimum sentencing.

My legislation also doubles the maximu penalty for arson that results in injury to any person, including a public safety official, to 40 years in prison and fines up to $200,000. Persons convicted of arson that includes injury will serve a minimum of five years in prison.

* Driver's Privacy Protection legislation will prohibit state Departments of Motor Vehicles from disclosing without authorization, personal information about a licensee, such as name and home address, to the general public. It will not prohibit the legitimate business, safety and governmental uses of this information.

* The Violence Summit provision urges the president to convene a presidential summit on violence in America, to bring together law enforcement officials, health professionals, community leaders, and others, in order to help build a national consensus on solutions to
